

AVOID DOUBLE TAXATION

If you have more than $1,000,000 in an IRA, and you've built enough wealth elsewhere to the point where you don't need your IRA for your own retirement, you can let your kids inherit it.

But if your estate will be subject to estate taxes, your kids will be double taxed on these funds – first with 40.00% in estate taxes, then with ordinary income taxes. In California, this means that 70.18% of your IRA will go to Uncle Sam (and only 29.82% will go to your kids).

We have a better alternative that is even better than a Roth conversion.
